

Invesco Sustainable Eurozone Equity Fund

Covering Q4 2024

This marketing communication is for professional investors only. Investors should read the legal documents prior to investing.

Philosophy

We focus on sustainability because it is core to durability. Our goal is to invest in companies that can offer a combination of financial return whilst also being a solution to the global need to decarbonise. This requires analysing, and reporting on, the decarbonisation efforts of our holdings.

There is huge interest on the part of many stakeholders, especially shareholders, to understand companies' transition targets and strategies. Companies cannot be allowed to just set long-term emissions targets and move on.

We believe it is important for companies to demonstrate their ability to deliver against those targets. This gives credibility to long-term targets.

Our experience in assessing financials and making forward looking financial estimates means we can make assessments on the likelihood of a company's transition.

Market review

Eurozone equity markets declined over the final quarter as political newsflow dominated headlines which meant European bourses ended the year with modest gains compared to the previous year. From a sector perspective, Q4 saw industrials as the best performing sector with communication services and technology also outperforming. Meanwhile, real estate, consumer staples and materials sectors were among the key laggards.

The European Central Bank (ECB) cut interest rates twice during the fourth quarter, while the accompanying statement in December suggested that policymakers are less concerned than previously about upside risks to inflation and that they don't expect to keep policy restrictive for much longer. The ECB said surveys indicated growth was slowing and that the recovery depended on consumers spending more and businesses increasing their investments. It cut its forecast for growth for the Eurozone economy in 2025 to 1.1%, from the 1.3% it had expected three months earlier. In other data released during Q4, the German Ifo Business Climate Index remained in recessionary territory, while the Composite PMI remained below 50.

The fourth quarter also saw significant political turmoil, much of it caused by domestic disagreements around fiscal prudence and deficits. There was a "no confidence" vote that ousted French Prime Minister Michel Barnier, which was the result of a showdown over the French budget. French bond yields spiked in response to Barnier's exit as well as dysfunction related to not passing a 2025 budget in time. Meanwhile, the German government collapsed, with a general election called for February 2025, seven months ahead of schedule amid a rocky patch for the EU's top economic power.

Performance

The fund declined by -4.23% during the quarter. The reference benchmark MSCI EMU Index (Net Total Return) returned -1.94%. The peer group, EAA Fund Eurozone Large-Cap Equity, provided an average return of -2.63%, which placed the fund in the fourth quartile of its peer group.

Stock selections within health care, industrials and energy sectors weighed most during Q4 while utilities, materials and technology were also relatively weak. Financials and consumer discretionary exposures proved most beneficial from a sector point of view, while zero allocation to real estate was also of some benefit.

From an individual stock perspective, Dutch health care name Philips was weak after third quarter sales failed to impress with China being cited as a 'notable headwind'. Elsewhere, German specialty chemical firm Wacker Chemie reported an earnings miss driven mostly by weakness in polymers, Finnish renewable energy name Neste ended a dismal year poorly, with weakness in its Renewable Products division once again a key drag, while French IT services provider Cap Gemini struggled after reporting reduced revenue growth, dragged lower by a decline in its North America market. Finally, performance from Dutch brewer Heineken was poor in part due to unfavourable weather and softer consumer sentiment, leading to earnings downgrades in Q4, and not owning aircraft manufacturer Airbus also weighed on relative returns.

The investment concerns the acquisition of units in an actively managed fund and not in a given underlying asset. ## Risk Warnings

For complete information on risks, refer to the legal documents.

The value of investments and any income will fluctuate (this may partly be the result of exchange-rate fluctuations) and investors may not get back the full amount invested.

"The lack of common standards may result in different approaches to setting and achieving ESG objectives. In addition, the respect of the ESG criteria may cause the Fund to forego certain investment opportunities."

More positively, Daimler Truck shares performed admirably as analysts were more positive on its prospects despite potential tariffs weighing on the sector. German industrial name Gea Group saw its shares respond well to a strong earnings margin forecast, while shares in Italian banking name Fincobank rose on the back of strong deposit inflows and higher brokerage revenues. Elsewhere, our large underweight in ASML as well as not owning luxury names L'Oreal and LVMH assisted relative returns during Q4.

Fincobank	0.2	Heineken	-0.3

Fund Activity

The overall tilt remains very much towards Value despite recent individual name changes. During Q4 we slightly altered the make up of our technology exposure by selling our small positions in BE Semiconductor and ASML in order to fund a new position in ASM which we felt was on a more appealing valuation versus other names in the sector and due to having less China risk, we felt there could be better earnings visibility. Within our banking exposure we bought a new position in BBVA and sold Santander at the same time. Our emissions analysis showed more risk of financed emissions treatment at Santander while BBVA have a more conservative approach which led us to favour BBVA. Elsewhere we took profits by selling ING.

Energy	3.0	Financials	-2.9
Utilities	2.5	Information Technology	-2.0

Outlook

Sentiment towards Europe is obviously extremely low currently – the difficult political backdrop and low growth regionally makes it a complex place to invest. However, valuations already reflect this with European equities trading at the widest discount to the US since pre the sovereign debt crisis. We feel there are some exceptionally interesting opportunities amongst European equities, particularly if the downbeat picture forecast by so many is not so gloomy after all. If we see Germany and France find resolutions to their political stalemate and there is better visibility fiscally, that will be a huge help. Any sort of resolution in the Ukraine/Russia conflict would provide some impetus and again the opportunity there from a reconstruction angle would be significant, particularly so for European corporates. Elsewhere, with interest rates coming down from their highs and credit conditions easing, we are already seeing credit demand pick-up both at the corporate and consumer level while the European consumer is now enjoying growth in spending power having enjoyed material real wage growth over 2024, and also given the high savings rate. Well over 50% of European GDP is driven by the consumer and so an increase in consumer confidence and consequentially consumer spending would be meaningful.

As far as positioning is concerned, we are trying to find the right balance to weather shorter-term volatilities, whilst being well placed to take advantage of longer-term opportunities. Today, we remain exposed to some defensives including telecoms and utilities, but also with exposure to cyclicals where we believe the future opportunity is undervalued by the market. This can be in the form of selected materials or industrials where names are trading on depressed earnings and multiples. We also retain exposure to energy names where capital discipline and shareholder returns are much improved and more reliable, as well as in sustainable aviation fuel. Pharmaceuticals is also an area we like where we believe R&D potential is undervalued, while financials are another area of exposure which – like energy – are now well capitalised and generating strong sustainable earnings and shareholder returns.

There is no doubt the economic recovery has been slower than we had anticipated in 2024 and our portfolio positioning has suffered as a consequence – however, it feels like momentum is tentatively turning and the cyclical tilt in our positioning is well-placed to benefit in that environment.
